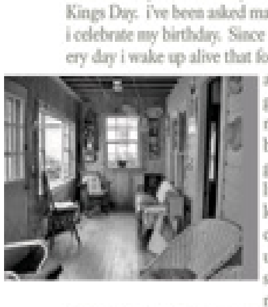
Sunni militants fighting under the banner of Al Qaeda appeared to make gains across Anbar Province on Saturday, using snipers and rocket-propelled grenades in heavy street fighting as they secured nearly full control of Falluja and captured the strategic town Karma. Government forces and the tribal militias fighting with them seemed unable to resist the militants advances. My humble words for my 71st birthday celebration on 3 Kings Day. i've been asked many times how i celebrate my birthday. Since i celebrate every day i wake up alive that for me is the best way i can answer the question regarding the celebration of my birthday. At my age i believe i've lived much longer than i had expected to live. And that's an excellent reason why i should celebrate every day i wake up, look up at the sky to see if there are stars or the moon out and feel the palpitation of my heart to confirm that i'm alive for real. The reaction to my allergies can make me aware that i'm alive, but that's something i don't really like to use because it can affect my desire to celebrate life.



i believe we should celebrate every day just for having awoken. When i've this idea with people they have question it. My response is that we should pay attention to the relativity of the human destiny. Because it doesn't matter how miserable one feels and how bad one thinks conditions are, the fact remains one is alive. And when one feels miserable all one has to do is to look around and one will see another person in worse conditions doing what might look impossible and facing the challenge without complaining. If one feels miserable because he or she lost an eye the person he or she sees dealing with the challenge that seems impossible is totally blind. That's why we should always take into consideration the relativity of the human destiny. When we start a new year or the calendar is telling us a new year has started we should look at it as a chance to complete what we have not been able to accomplish in the past. When we face a crisis we should look at it as an opportunity to deal with it and to find a solution. It doesn't matter where we are. For example, when the earthquake devastated Mexico City and there was a major crisis we came up with the idea to raise funds from the prison population in order to give a hand to the victims of the earthquake. We talked to the staff and the idea was accepted. We were allowed to set up tables and get the prisoners to sign a form to have the money discounted from their funds. Within two hours we had raised over five thousand dollars. At first we had no idea how to help the victims. But after discussing the issue we were able to come up with a solution. We were able to do what for others seemed impossible. Celebrate life and not the commodification of it. We can share and enjoy the act of and make it meaningful. We can celebrate any such moment and give meaning to our daily life and make it a real important cultural event. Life is an act of giving and receiving. But when the sharing of gifts is commodified it becomes another act of consumerism and our culture is the one that suffers its consequences. Any moment we celebrate our culture we are helping to pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 Kings Day and enjoy it to the utmost. If we believe a better and more just world is possible, we don't have to go to a far away place in the globe to make our contribution to such a lofty cause. We can do it right where we live. But we have to be willing to roll up our sleeves and do the hard work. Words are important, but it's the work that bears fruits. And if we learn one lesson in life that's worthwhile holding on and passing it on is that the only thing that's impossible is that that doesn't get done. It was Madeba who said that any problem us humans create have a solution. If there is a poverty problem it can be solved if we tackle it. Let's emulate Madeba's example. Let's dare to struggle. let's dare to win. Talk the talk and walk the walk. i leave you with a big hug with much love. Take care, abrazos, Oscar Lopez Rivera Anarchism is part of a broader range of libertarian socialist thought and action that includes the practical achievements of revolutionary Spain in 1936; reaches further to worker-owned enterprises spreading today in the American rust belt, in northern Mexico, in Egypt, and many other countries, most extensively in the Basque country in Spain; and encompasses the many cooperative movements around the world and a good part of feminist and civil and human rights initiatives. This broad tendency in human development seeks to identify structures of hierarchy, authority and domination that constrain human development, and then subject them to a very reasonable challenge: Justify yourself. A former Columbia, Illinois resident pled guilty on January 10, 2014, to a two-count indictment charging him, in count one, with receipt of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2252(a)(2); and, in count two, with possession of visual depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2252(a)(4)(B), the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, Stephen R. Wigginton, announced today. Neil E. Purdy, 29, formerly of Columbia, Illinois, faces a term of imprisonment of not less than five but not more than 20 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count one; and a term of imprisonment of not more than 10 years, a fine up to $250,000, and a term of supervised release of five years to life on count two. In addition, upon his release from prison, Purdy must register as a sex offender. Sentencing is scheduled for May 16, 2014, in East St. Louis, Illinois. Purdy has been held without bond since his initial appearance on April 26, 2013.

The investigation began on February 7, 2012, when an individual contacted the Columbia Police Department to report that the defendant molested his/her 14-year-old child. He/she also told the Columbia police that he/she saw the defendant "Google" the phrase, "where can I find really young porn." He/she said that, when he/she asked the defendant, "How long have you had this little problem?" Purdy responded, "About three years." On February 16, 2012, Purdy, a member of the U.S. Navy Reserve with top secret clearance, admitted to Columbia the number of hunger strikers in Guantanamo has doubled since the final set of official figures was released by the US authorities on December 2 2013. The report, compiled by human rights charity Reprieve, uses prisoner testimony to reveal that 33 men detained in Guantanamo are on hunger strike, with 16 being force fed. The Joint Task Force at Guantanamo, which runs the prison, announced in December of 2013 that they would no longer release official figures of those on hunger strike because they did not want to 'further their protests'. The report also reveals that authorities at the prison are punishing those on hunger strike by sending them to the strictest of the camps, "Camp V Echo". One detainee described his experiences there to his lawyer at Reprieve: "My cell in the dreadful Camp V Echo is constructed in a strange manner. It is designed to torture the person who is held there. All the surfaces made of steel. The bed is steel. The walls are steel. The floor is steel. The ceiling is steel. There is no toilet, but the hole in the ground is made of steel." British resident Shaker Aamer, who remains imprisoned despite having been cleared by both the Bush and Obama administrations, said: "[I was] strapped to the bed for 24 hours except to use the toilet. The [force-feeding] tube was in 24 hours a day. We would be fed for 30-40 minutes each time, with Ensure cans, two cans, three times a day. Some of the prisoners became zombies, as if they were already dead. I dropped weight to 130 pounds. I told the doctors, 'I want to die peacefully. I want no intervention.' But they refused this." Mr Aamer's British wife and four British children, the youngest of whom he has never met, live in London. British Prime Minister David Cameron has raised his case directly with President Obama, yet Mr Aamer remains imprisoned. There is an ongoing police investigation into Mr Aamer's treatment at the hands of British and US officials. 155 men are still detained in Guantanamo Bay, 77 of who have been cleared for release. Yesterday (Saturday) marked the twelfth anniversary of the first arrival of prisoners at the detention camp. Of the 779 men known to have been held there 624 have been released. More prisoners have died than have been put on trial. In an endlessly mutating world of media forms, scholars, creative practitioners and professionals in a variety of fields need to understand the ways in which media transforms and dissolves boundaries among disciplines and creates new forms of knowledge and cultural production. The Master of Arts (M.A.) in Media Studies provides students with the conceptual and practical tools necessary to prepare themselves to engage some of the fundamental challenges and complexities of our times. The program interrogates the social, practical, economic, political and theoretical stakes of mediation considered in the widest possible sense, encompassing more traditional approaches to the study of media (print, film, photography, audio and television), in conjunction with approaches that address the massive shifts produced by the computer and internet including gaming and social media Students will benefit from an academic environment shaped not only by theorists and critics, but also by distinguished practitioners of the forms being studied. Students study and work among theorists, artists and designers and are taught by faculty-practitioners. Our courses are small, intensive, seminars taught exclusively by professors. The program is 30 credits and can be completed in threesemesters. Among the core requirements are (1) six credit hours of courses sist across California this weekend. On Saturday, gusty winds will combine with these dry conditions to raise the risk of wildfires, especially in southern California. Meanwhile, parts of the Plains and Deep South will also experience dry winds leading to increased fire risk this weekend. An individual who robbed a bank yesterday morning in Phoenix and who later was shot and killed in an exchange of gunfire with a Phoenix police detective has been identified as the same individual responsible for the attempted bank robbery in Atlanta, the robbery of the BancorpSouth in Tupelo, the shooting of Tupelo Police Officer Joseph Edward Maher, and the murder of Tupelo Police Officer Kevin "Gale" Stauffer. This identification has been made based upon similarities between these bank robberies, including the clothing worn by the bank robber, statements made by the bank robber during the robberies, and the robber's overall modus operandi, supported by other evidence and information collected during the course of this investigation. Additionally, cell phone records obtained via court order indicated that this individual's phone was in Atlanta, Tupelo, and Phoenix when the bank robberies were committed.

Not many people come to Fort McMurray, the notorious Alberta boom town on the edge of one of the world's largest industrial developments, to commune with the great northern woods. Most are here for the overtime, for the paid vacations, for the blue-collar jobs that pay six figures, for the work. This means that all of the bad things you've heard about Fort McMoney are true: the traffic really is murderous, there are liquor stores (many open until 2 a.m.) in every strip mall, and the place has a depressingly large population of desperately lonely guys blowing ridiculously fat paycheques on steroids, tattoos, monster trucks, and peelers. America has been redistributing upward for after all, "trickle-down" economics turned out to be trickle up, but we outdid ourselves in 2013. At a time of record inequality and decreasing mobility, America conducted a Great Redistribution upward.

When we speak of WMD, we usually think of weapons -- nuclear, biological, or chemical -- that are delivered in a measurable moment in time. Consider climate change, then, a WMD on a particularly long fuse, already lit and there for any of us to see. From oil wells to fracking structures, deep sea drilling rigs to platforms in the Gulf of Mexico, the machinery that produces this kind of WMD and ensures that it is continuously delivered is in plain sight. Since 2007, activists have risked arrests, imprisonment, heavy fines and massive police force to resist the desecration caused as mega-corporations like Samsung and Daelim to build a base to accommodate U.S. nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and submarines for their missions throughout Asia. The base fits the regional needs of the U.S. for a maritime military outpost that would enable it to continue developing its Asia Pivot strategy.

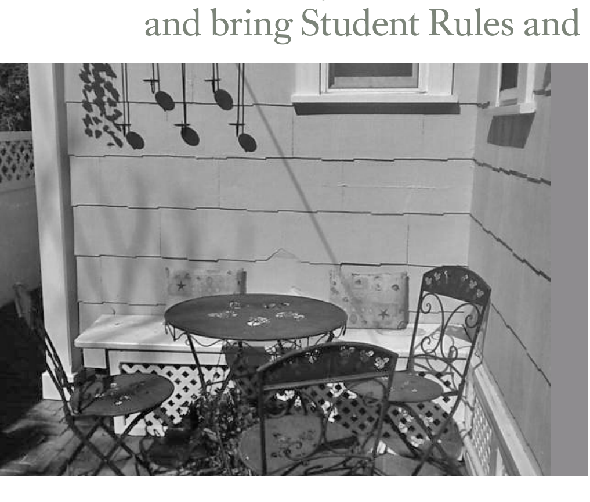
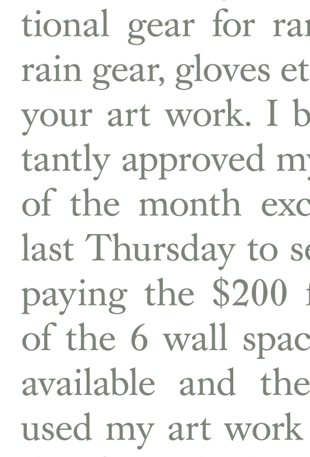
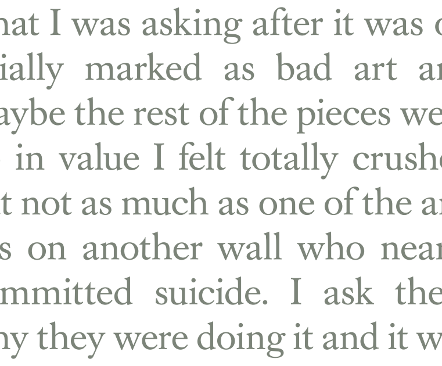
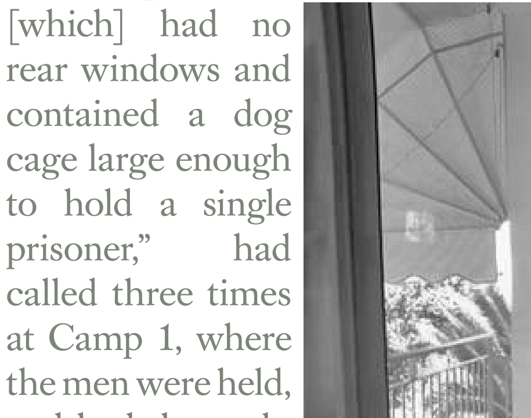
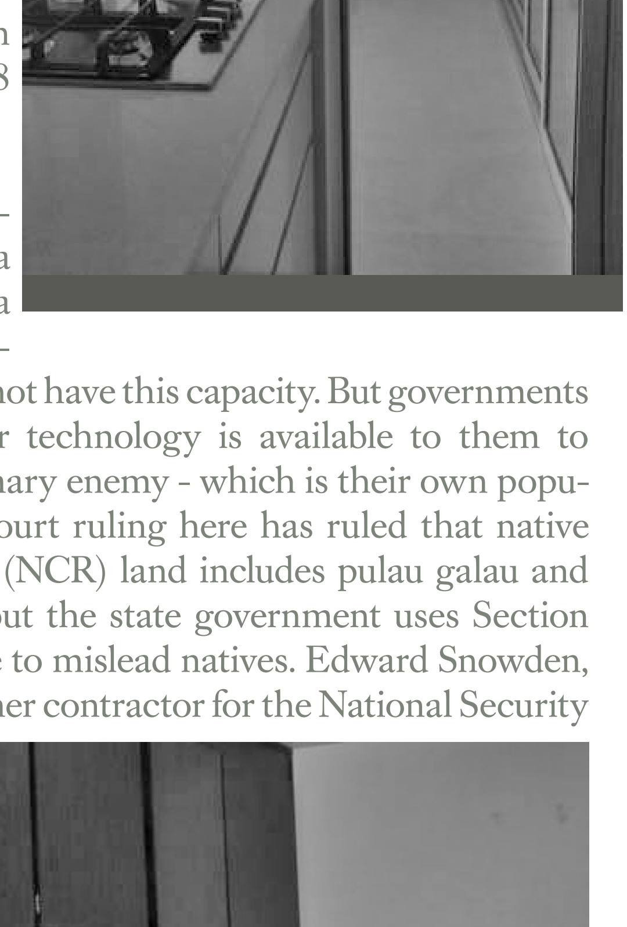
I brought my portfolio and they reluctantly approved my selling there and then I got all days of the month except for last Thursday to sell after paying the $200 for one of the 6 wall space areas available and then they used my art work as fodder for a bad art salon where they sat around laughing at it and then someone spray painted a "Bad Art" stencil on each piece they voted was true bad art and I sold only one of them and even thought they guy who paid twice as much as what I was asking after it was officially marked as bad art and maybe the rest of the pieces went up in value I felt totally crushed but not as much as one of the artists on another wall who nearly committed suicide. I ask them why they were doing it and it was to train art inspectors for up and coming "charettes" to decide who gets to sell on last Thursday and who does not . Thank you city commissioners for the exposure. Hickman and Davila became fascinated by the compound --- known to the soldiers as "Camp No" (as in, "No, it doesn't exist") --- and Hickman was on duty in a tower on the prison's perimeter on the night the three men died, when he noticed that "a white van, dubbed the 'paddy wagon,' that Navy guards used to transport heavily manacled prisoners, one at a time, into and out of Camp Delta, [which] had no rear windows and contained a dog cage large enough to hold a single prisoner," had called three times at Camp 1, where the men were held, and had then taken them out to "Camp No." All three were in "Camp No" by 8 pm.











The snooping itself constitutes a wrongdoing on a wide scale: Governments should not have this capacity. But governments will use whatever technology is available to them to combat their primary enemy - which is their own population. A High Court ruling here has ruled that native customary rights (NCR) land includes pulau galau and pemakai menua,but the state government uses Section 6 of the land code to mislead natives. Edward Snowden, an American former contractor for the National Security Agency (NSA), came forward as the whistle-blower in one of the biggest internal leaks in U.S. intelligence history now seeking asylum According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Snowden would not be given preferential treatment if he were to apply for asylum in Hong Kong. He seems to have complete and total trust in the Hong Kong political and judiciary system: "Hong Kong has a strong tradition of free speech. People think China, Great Firewall ... but the people of Hong Kong have a long tradition of protesting on the streets, making their views known ... and I believe the Hong Kong government is actually independent in relation to a lot of other leading Western governments."

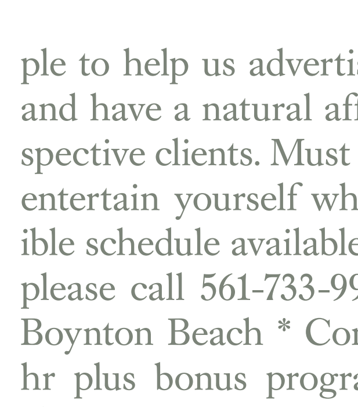
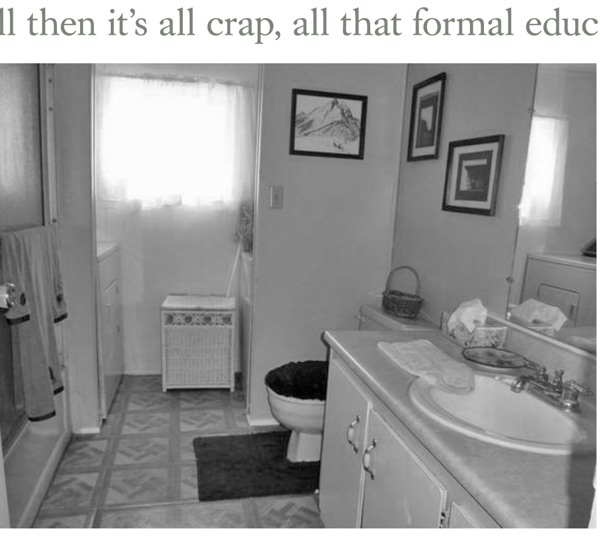
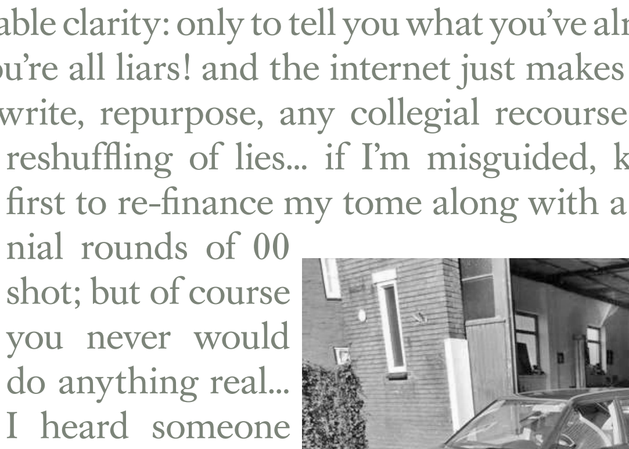
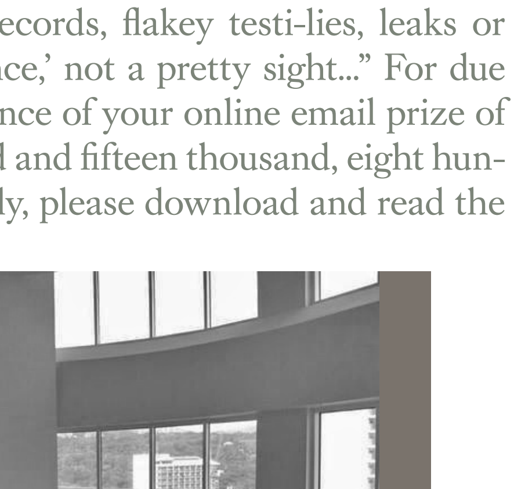
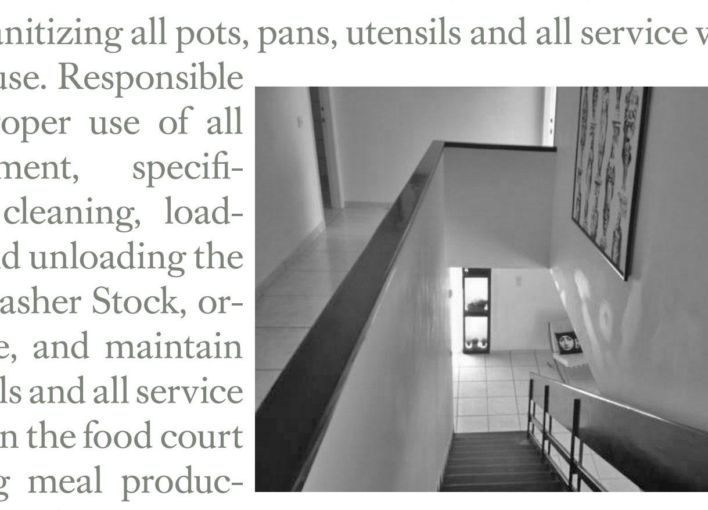
All best, Ellen Weinauer Officials say a Florida Panhandle deputy ran over a woman who was sleeping on the beach. Florida Highway Patrol investigators have found Deputy Chad Biernacki at fault for the Tuesday evening accident. The Walton County Sheriff's Office reports that Biernacki was patrolling Miramar Beach when he issued a group of underage drinkers notices to appear. After getting back into his truck, Biernacki was making a U-turn when his right front tire rolled over 21-year-old Jessica Nystrom. The Northwest Florida Daily News reports that the woman was taken to Sacred Heart Hospital Tuesday night and then released Wednesday. FHP says the crash remains under investigation, but alcohol did not seem to be a factor. While Biernacki was found to be at fault, it wasn't immediately clear what charges he would face. He will remain on active duty. A newborn baby girl died in Indias northern Punjab state after doctors removed her from an incubator that her parents couldnt afford. The incubator cost the hospital 200 rupees ($3.60).

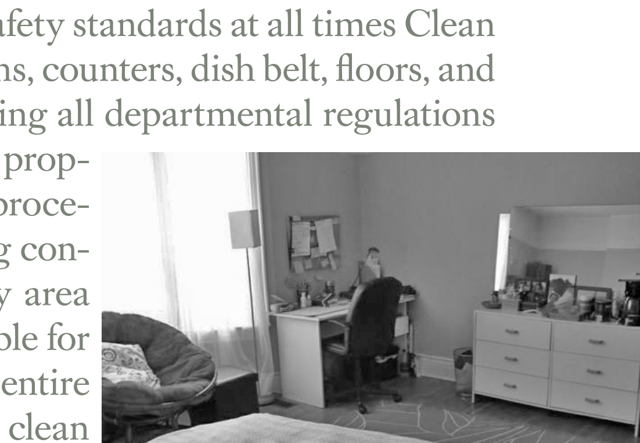


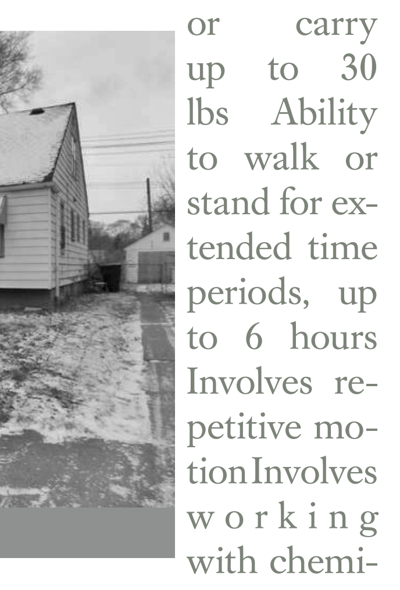


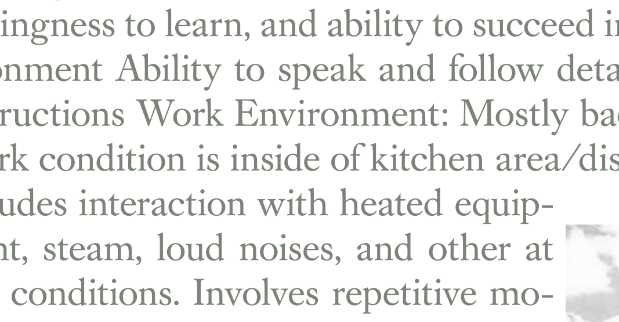


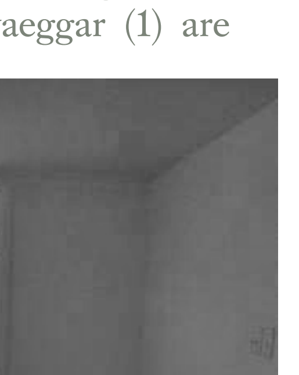


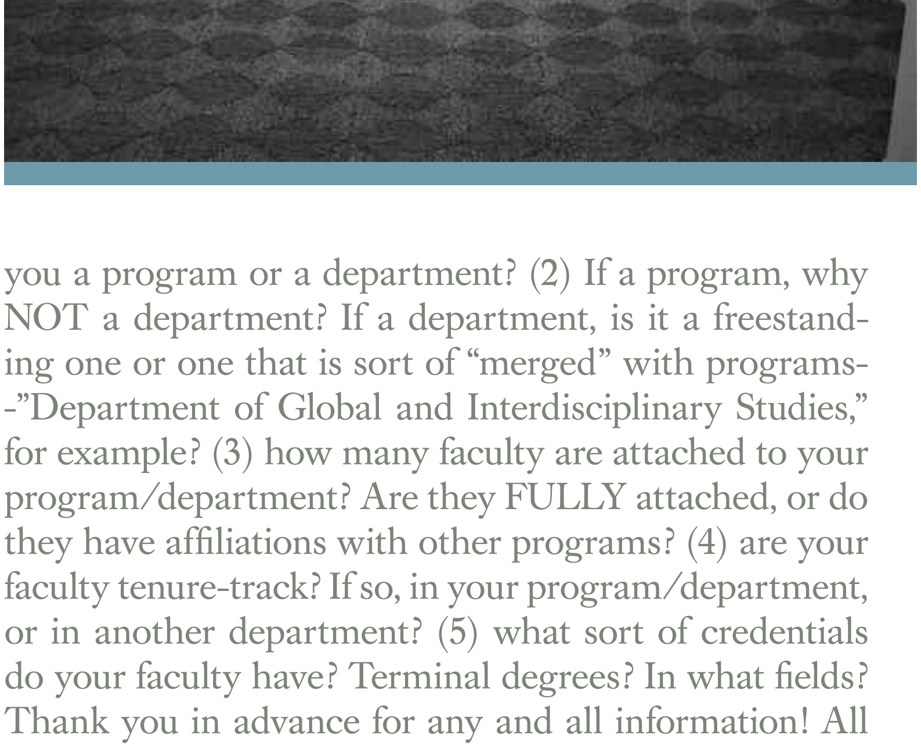


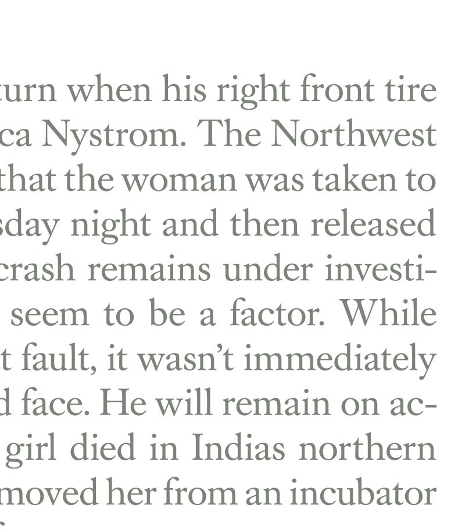


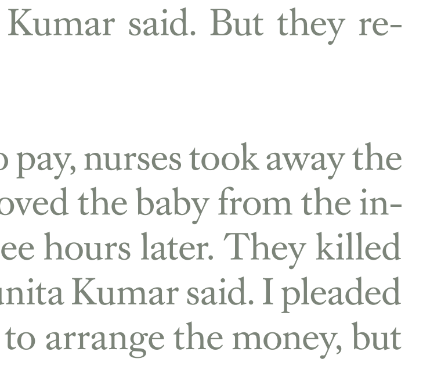












A premature newborn girl was in critical condition and needed incubator support in order to live. Two days after placing her in the incubator, hospital officials demanded that the family pay 200 rupees towards electricity charges. Unfortunately, the babys father, Sanjiv Kumar was an unemployed painter and couldnt pay the amount on time. We begged and pleaded with them to keep our child alive in the incubator and that we would pay them the money later, a distraught Kumar said. But they refused.

When the family was unable to pay, nurses took away the saline drip, while officials removed the baby from the incubator, causing her to die three hours later. They killed my child, the baby's mother Sunita Kumar said. I pleaded that my husband needed time to arrange the money, but to no avail and the baby was taken out of the incubator. Every transfer of Bitcoin as Nakamoto designed the system offers the possibility to track the economic activity and associations of anyone using Bitcoin -- as Barber et al. note, all Bitcoins are public knowledge. [16] As a surveillance apparatus, it is difficult to imagine a more perfect way to monitor how citizens behave than to link transaction histories to the currency itself. Even peer-to-peer exchanges that would be beyond oversight with a traditional currency become subject to precise scrutiny. In attempting to remove the third party (bank/government) from the exchange process, Bitcoin instead enshrines the authority it attempts to displace.

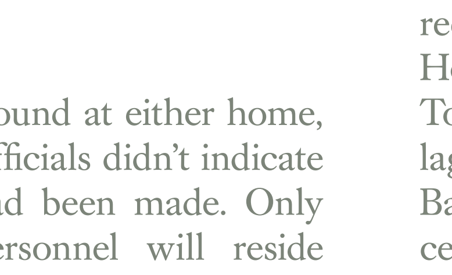
Two growhouse busts this week at empty Golden Gate Estates homes turned up 176 marijuana plants, Collier sheriff's deputies said Thursday. Deputies executing search warrants found the plants behind the homes located at 2770 Desoto Blvd. S. and 4019 22nd Ave. N.E. The Sheriff's Office, which values each plant at $3,000, said the plants had a combined street value estimated at $528,000.

Deputies searched the Desoto Boulevard South home Tuesday, finding 95 plants and growing equipment valued at about $30,000 in a large metal structure behind the home. One day later, deputies searched the 22nd Avenue Northeast home, finding a recently dismantled metal structure. Behind the structure, investigators found a large pile of dirt used to cover 81 marijuana plants. Inside the home, two firearms and a sophisticated surveillance system were found.



Nobody was found at either home, and sheriff's officials didn't indicate any arrests had been made. Only authorized personnel will reside or visit in the dormitory. Science and Technology serves museums in a variety of ways: from the technical examination of artist's methods and materials; to informing decisions on safer ways to exhibit, store, and transport art; and finally to new conservation methods that are safer or more effective. All museums benefit from the application of science in some way. Modern and contemporary art poses specific challenges for two different reasons: the media the artists can draw from is more varied than any other period in history and the works are all young in age. These aspects can make a conservator's job easy or extremely difficult. They can also help improve our understanding of how works by Old Masters may have changed. Since conservators of contemporary art are often the first to treat an object it is particularly important treatments are always carefully considered and well informed and science can play a major role in that regard.

Hamilton police said the soldier was robbed as he left his home on Erie Avenue at 10 a.m. Thursday.

The 22-year-old was confronted by a "scraggly-looking" man who asked for money, then pulled a knife. In the fight that followed, the soldier was cut and dropped a pouch containing the cash, which the bandit grabbed. What questions do you have about the job? Why would you be great for this job? Gentlemen: Has there been any indication from your readers of the scarcitty of butterflies this year? In this area which is usually quite prolific, I have seen practically none with the exception of a few flights of Fritillaries. Since March I have seen but one example of an Apantesis virgo, no Catocala caras at all, veryfew Swallowtails, one Queloia, no Peacock's Eyes, no Hipposcatics, and not even a sinclge Red Admiral in my garden, which last summer was teeming with butterflies. I wonder if this scarcity is widespread, and if so, what is the cause of it? M. Wasbourn We stand helpless before the corporate onslaught. There is no way to vote against corporate power. Citizens have no way to bring about the prosecution of Wall Street bankers and financiers for fraud, military and intelligence officials for torture and war crimes, or security and surveillance officers for human rights abuses. The Federal Reserve is reduced to printing money for banks and financiers and lending it to them at almost zero percent interest; corporate officers then lend it to us at usurious rates as high as 30 percent. I do not know what to call this system. It is certainly not capitalism. Extortion might be a better word. The fossil fuel industry, meanwhile, relentlessly trashes the ecosystem for profit. On May 10, Ros Montt, 86, was found guilty by a three-panel tribunal on charges of genocide and crimes against humanity, and sentenced to 80 years in the slammer; he is the first former head of state in the Americas to stand trial for genocide. But less than two weeks later, Guatemala's highest court threw out all proceedings in the case dating back to April 19, in part thanks to an aggressive lobbying effort by the nation's most influential business federation.

“When [art] becomes the object of academic disciplines as it is today, discourse can become a site of struggle among the factions and interest groups that compete for the cultural authority to speak about [art]. The Children’s Aid Society was founded in 1853 by Charles Loring Brace and a group of social reformers at a time when orphan asylums and almshouses were the only “social services” available for poor and homeless children. Brace’s theory of an organization devoted to helping poor children was radical. His progressive ideas translated into far-reaching services and reforms for poor and homeless children, working women, needy families and disabled boys and girls at a time when services for these groups were few and far between. Educated to be a minister, Brace was determined to give children an alternative to life in the squalid slums and teeming New York City streets. His theories were grounded in the conviction that institutional care stunted and destroyed children. According to Brace, the answers to transforming New York’s orphans and street children into self-reliant members of society were gainful work, education, and a wholesome family atmosphere. Charles Loring Brace’s work transformed the face of social services and social reforms in New York City and across the nation. His imprint his legacy has benefited millions and millions of children. Of course, much has changed since his time, including the concepts of children’s rights and parental responsibility, but Brace’s imprint remains an enduring one. The Orphan Train Movement Between 1853 and 1929, more than 150,000 abandoned, abused and orphaned children were rescued from the streets and slums of New York City and taken by train to start new lives with families on farms across the country. The emphasis was on giving these needy children a family life. The Victor Remer Historical Archives of The Children’s Aid Society Important historical records can be accessed via The Guide to the Records of The Children’s Aid Society (1853-1947). This guide contains materials pertaining to emigration programs such as the Orphan Train, foster care and adoption programs operating between 1853-1947, annual reports to 2006, a small collection of materials from 1948-1951, and The Children’s Aid Society lodging houses, industrial schools, convalescent homes, health centers and farm schools. Beach parking permits are valid for one year only. Observe the month that is punched on your beach parking sticker, and remember to replace the permit before the month ends. Health Care in Honduras Meets High Standards and Is Very Affordable Many Honduran physicians were trained in the United States, so they speak English and keep up-to-date practices. A visit to the doctor costs between US$5 and $15, and a private hospital room costs $30 to $40 a day. You can have complex surgery performed for as little as $1,000. Shocking images of police violence draw much-needed attention to protests and larger issue of police brutality. Subject: Barney Just had an invitation to visit Barney and Marie this Friday.They have a new dog, a pug of some kind. However, it ate Lefty, their old parrot. Apparently he flew down from his cage to the floor near the dog and that was the end of him. Freedom is free time, time freed from labor, from bossed time for pay. But time entirely freed from labor, from bossed time for pay, from doing what another wants the way they want in exchange for the means to get the products and services one wants produced by the bossed time of others, that is unemployment, thrown in the street, living on the charity of one’s family, one’s mosque, or.....theft. Schedule/Pay: This is an unpaid internship but $10 per day is provided for expenses. Minimum of 16 hours per week. Full-time welcome. Course credit is possible. Schedule may be arranged to suit individual needs but we would prefer interns to work two or more days per week. Curatorial Assistance office hours are Monday - Friday, 9:00-6:00.

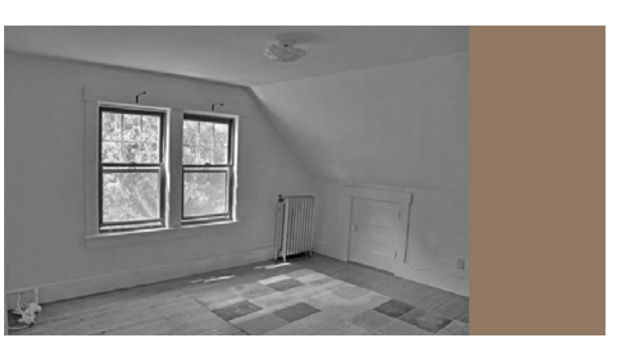
I am in receipt of your fax dated 10/7/13 which asked about recoverable assistance if you sign up for OHP on or after the age of 55. Federal law generally dictates what is recoverable assistance. There are Oregon Administrative Rules which state what is recoverable assistance for Oregon. Generally, assistance for Medicaid (and OHP) is recoverable for 1) a person who is age 55 or older or 2) who has been permanently institutionalized (such as lived in a nursing facility and received assistance) for at least 6 months prior to a person's death. Also, 3) if the recipient received Medicaid cash benefits (such as those for special needs payments or General Assistance), these benefits are recoverable regardless of the age at which they were received.

Finally, if there is a claim in the estate of a deceased Medicaid recipient, the personal representative or the affiant of the estate can request an assistance summary which will give specific information about the charges for recoverable assistance. I hope that this information is helpful to you. This e-mail may contain information that is privileged, confidential, or otherwise exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the addressee or it appears from the context or otherwise that you have received this e-mail in error, please advise me immediately by reply e-mail, keep the contents confidential, and immediately delete the message and any attachments from your system.

Yes, this is the case. We have many elderly (or over 55) clients who cannot afford the cost of nursing home, assisted living, or other types of care and who have to spend down all of their resources in order to get the care that they need (and deserve). Some have homes, which, if not sold during the client's lifetime, become estate assets after the client dies. These estate assets are ones from which the State can seek recovery in order to reimburse it for the Medicaid provided.

The scenarie of collecting from estates of deceased recipients is not an unusual one, then, whether it is for those clients who receive long-term care or for those who receive OHP assistance. The recovery, you should know, is only on estate assets (or those assets which meet the State's expanded definition of an estate asset). If the recoverable Medicaid paid is valued at $200,000 and the amount of the estate is $100,000, then Medicaid can only collect what is in the estate - the $100,000 at most. So, not all of the bill is paid - in many instances. In fact most Medicaid recipients only have about $2000 in resources because that is the limit allowed in order to receive Medicaid. The real question to ask is if you really want to give up the chance to have some kind of heatlh care.



I often tell people that their family want to see them healthy rather than ill - even if it means lower inheritances, etc. It is certainly something that I would tell my family - although quite frankly I don't have a lot of assets.. We have an opportunity now to provide health care to a wide range of people that often had to be told to wait for their name to come up on a list or even worse yet who were told that despite their relatively low income, they still didn't qualify for some kind of assistance. Our society has determined that it won't provide some health care "for free." Maybe one of these days that will change, but in the meantime, it has at least determined that no one should have to go without health care. That is a huge step in and of itself.

The degree of surveillance will simply escalate along with the technology -- what's unjust is the access to the information: the proverbial level-playing-field was the one big "underlying" promise of the Internet... We all should be able to learn where the rogue-cops, corrupt CEOs, gangsters, embedded politicos live, what they buy, how much they're paid and by-whom, etc.

Years ago I remember a story about a small town in France(?) that mounted accessible-web-cams in most public areas (including police stations) so that any citizen at any time could monitor and report on transgressions to the common-good, with the result that police were hardly needed as there was little crime and the community felt much safer/responsible.

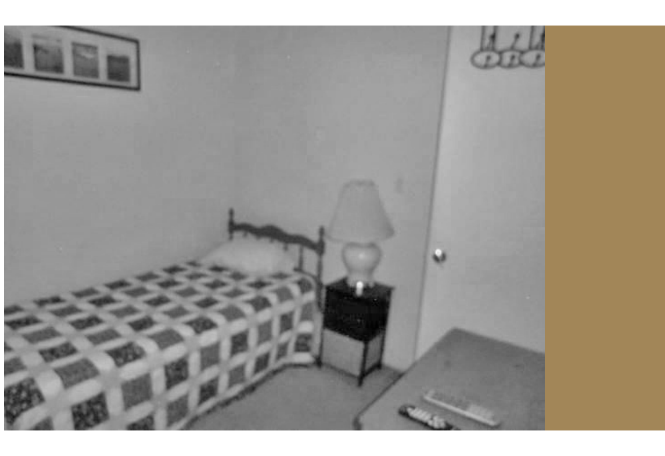
Spend foreign aid money on education, healthcare and lifting people out of poverty. For a fraction of the money we keep wasting each month on the failed war in Afghanistan or supporting the already wealthy Israeli military, we could be building schools in Afghanistan and Pakistan, helping Yemenis find a solution to their water shortages, and providing humanitarian aid to Syrian refugees. We'll make a lot more friends building clinics, wells, electrical grids and schools than vaporizing people with Hellfire missiles.



The Pirah are supremely gifted in all the ways necessary to ensure their continued survival in the jungle: they know the usefulness and location of all important plants in their area; they understand the behavior of local animals and how to catch and avoid them; and they can walk into the jungle naked, with no tools or weapons, and walk out three days later with baskets of fruit, nuts, and small game.

The Pirah speak the Pirah language. They call any other language Crooked head. Members of the Pirah can whistle their language, which is how the tribe's men communicate when hunting in the jungle. Steamed Buns on ChaoYang road and more of a hole-in-the-wall than a street stall; at 5pm everyday youll find this place busy with people buying an assortment of steamed buns. Caibao, steamed buns stuffed with veggies, are the most popular. But they also sell mantou (plain white steamed buns), heibao (slightly sweet brown sugar buns) and huazzhuan (salty chinese celery). These are a great filling snack and they will set you back a measly $NTD12!

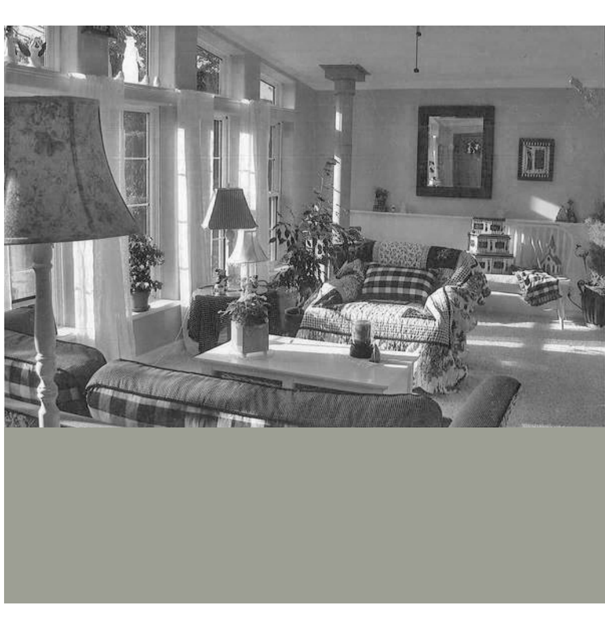
The long-overdue election functions, substantially, as an attempt to bring Madagascar back into the international community. Already one of the poorest countries in the world, Madagascar was further isolated and foreign aid disappeared in 2009 when 34 year-old radio disc jockey Andry Rajoelina, with the help of the military, toppled dairy magnate Marc Ravalomanana in a coup d'etat. Virtually no progress was made for four years with the economy contracting severely. Political and economic progress has limped along since. A new rugby stadium is one of the only tangible accomplishments of the "transitional" regime led by Andry Rajoelina, who is now close to completing a full electoral mandate.



The Council of 13 Indigenous Grandmothers "a force or the good of all beings": is a group of matriarchs who are spiritual leaders from native communities around the world. Coming from what they call "the four directions": North and South America, Africa, and Asia -- they work to educate others about indigenous ways of life, sacred stories, and values. Most importantly for them, they pray for healing the Earth and the reconciliation of its people.

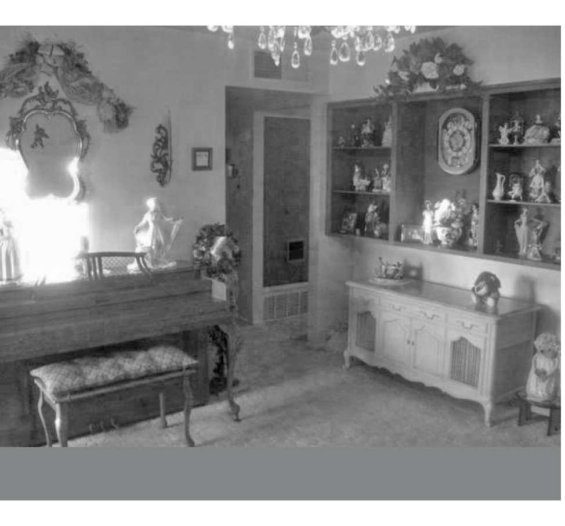
The NSA computer attacks are performed by a special department called TAO (Tailored Access Operations). Public sources show that this department employs more than a thousand hackers. According to the Washington Post, the NSA has been carrying out this type of cyber operation since 1998. The American intelligence service - NSA - infected more than 50,000 computer networks worldwide with malicious software designed to steal sensitive information. Documents provided by former NSA-employee Edward Snowden and seen by this newspaper, prove this.

A Toronto police officer was suspended with pay after he fatally shot a young man wielding a knife in an empty streetcar, police said Monday, as hundreds of people in Canadas largest city protested the shooting that was caught on video and posted on YouTube. Some protesters called it unnecessary police force. A former Toronto police detective who saw the video said it appeared that excessive force had been used.



Investigators were looking into the circumstances surrounding the shooting, the citys police chief said. The video shows 18-year-old Sammy Yatim holding a knife inside the streetcar early Saturday, with police outside. Yatim goads police while officers yell, Drop your knife! Shortly after, three shots are fired. After a pause, six more shots are fired. A Taser is later used on Yatim.

She studied Fine Art at Joshibi University of Art and Design. In 2004 she moved to Toronto, where she started experimenting with photography as an extension of her painting practice. Kubota works in black & white, with two photographs on top of each other, while meticulously cutting away thin vertical strips of the top layer to reveal slivers of the image beneath. For her new series she's working with circular shapes and cut-outs. The out of grey series are dynamic photo-based works, where the line between two and three dimensional space is blurred, creating the effect of vibration where movement and stillness are courteous rivals.

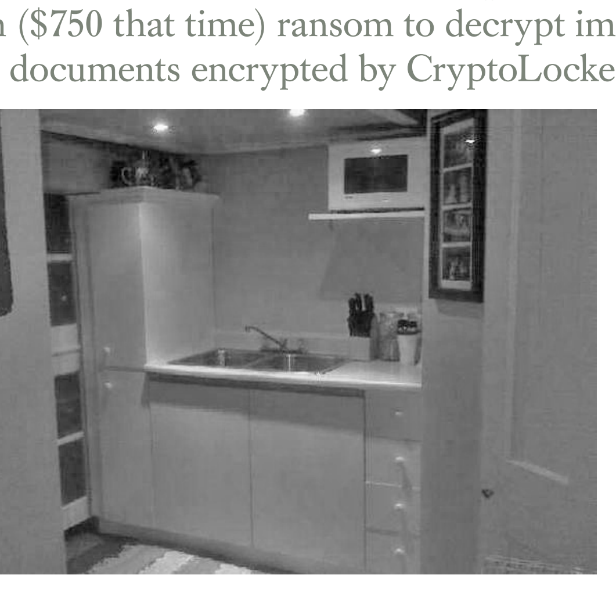
Bank executives have displayed disrespect for both law and regulation, that they are not worthy of the public's trust, and that they are culturally impaired at a profound level. It's not easy to maintain a civil tone while describing the magnitude of the misbehavior among executives at Wall Street's largest institutions. To criticize bankers is to describe large-scale wrongdoing, mass-produced outrages that lead to widespread misery. It can't be done without routinely deploying words like "perjury," "forgery," "fraud," "deceit," "corruption" and "rapaciousness." A Business Magnate who lived in China for Nineteen years but died with family during the TYPHOON HAIYAN attack that happened in the PHILIPPINES On Friday the 8th of November 2013 . US police department pays $750 Ransom to retrieve their files from CryptoLocker Malware.

The CryptoLocker Malware continues to spread, infected more than 12,000 U.S computers in one week and threatening millions of computers in the UK. Just last week, The UK National Crime Agency urge people afflicted by CryptoLocker not to pay ransom, not least because there is no guarantee that they will even receive an unlock key. Not even Police departments are immune to CryptoLocker. In November second week, Massachusetts' Swansea Police Department paid a 2 Bitcoin ($750 that time) ransom to decrypt images and Word documents encrypted by CryptoLocker ransomware.



"It gave us 100 hours to pay and it was literally a timer," said Police Department. "A big red screen comes up with a timer that says you have 100 hours to pay or your files will be encrypted forever." At least two law enforcement officers infiltrated the training camp and drafted a detailed report about the upcoming protest, internal strategy, and the character of the protesters themselves.

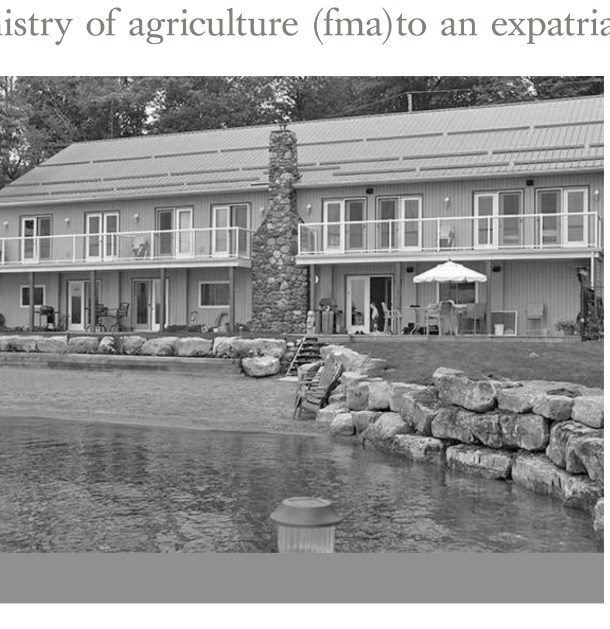
The undercover investigator who wrote the report put the tar sands opponents into five different groups: eco-activists (who "truly wanted to live off the grid"); Occupy members; Native American activists ("who blamed all forms of government for the poor state of being that most American Indians are living in"); Anarchists ("many wore upside down American flags"); and locals from Oklahoma (who "had concerns about the pipeline harming the community").

Dear Friend It is with trust and confidence that i write to make this urgent business proposal to you.i was assigned by two of my colleague to seek for a foreign partner who will assist us in providing a convenient foreign account in any designated bank abroad for the transfer of us$35,500,000.00 pending on our arrival in your country for utilization and disbursement with the owner of the account. This amount results from a deliberate inflation of the value of a contract awarded by our ministry - the federal ministry of agriculture (fma)to an expatriate company.



the contract has been executed and payment made to the original contractor, remaining the over-invoiced amount of us$35.5 million, which we want to transfer the funds out the country in ourfavour for disbursement among ourselves.the transfer of this money can only be possible with the help of a foreigner who will be presented as the beneficiary of the fund. 204 Liquor In an odd position, where the 204 road meets the 203 road, is another family run joint tucked in a building just behind the decaying dolphin statue. There were 502 households out of which 16.1% had children under the age of 18 living with them, 43.2% were married couples living together, 6.8% had a female householder with no husband present, and 45.2% were non-families. 35.1% of all households were made up of individuals and 15.3% had someone living alone who was 65 years of age or older. The average household size was 2.00 and the average family size was 2.54. The City of Detroit's bankruptcy was driven by a severe decline in revenues (and, importantly, not an increase in obligations to fund pensions). Depopulation and long-term unemployment caused Detroit's property and income tax revenues to plummet. The state of Michigan exacerbated the problems by slashing revenue it shared with the city. The city's overall expenses have declined over the last five years, although its financial expenses have increased. In addition, Wall Street sold risky financial instruments to the city, which now threaten the resolution of this crisis. To return Detroit to long-term fiscal health, the city must increase revenue and extract itself from the financial transactions that threaten to drain its budget even further.

When I think about all we have lost to this corporate world, when I think about the losses of clean water and rivers and oceans and when I think about the losses of clean air when I think about the losses of freedom for hard working families that once had a father that could take care of his family with as single job but now has to work two or three jobs and the mother must work too and the children that come home from school with their own key and have to wait the return of one of their parents. When I think of these losses, when I think of the wage slaves that are being created daily all over the world in the name of progress, when I think of these losses I think... we damn sure have a good reason to mourn...

The FBI seized a website called 'Silk Road', that was considered one of the most popular Underground places on the Internet for buying drugs and other illicit goods and services.

They arrested the site's alleged founder, Ross William Ulbricht, known as "Dread Pirate Roberts," in San Francisco, who reportedly had 26,000 Bitcoins worth $3.6 million. The FBI used information from Comcast in the investigation and collaborated with US Customs and Border Patrol, the Internal Revenue Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and the Department of Homeland Security. Ross William Ulbricht, a 29-year-old graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Materials Science and Engineering charged with one count each of narcotics trafficking conspiracy, computer hacking conspiracy and money laundering conspiracy, according to the filing. 'Silk Road' website, which had operated since early 2011, also offered tutorials on hacking ATM machines, contact lists for black market connections and counterfeiters, and guns and hit men for sale, according to the charges. Silk Road was only accessible on The Onion Router [Tor], which is an anonymous web browser that allows certain sites to operate out of reach of the authorities by routing connections through many different layers of the Internet to make identification difficult.

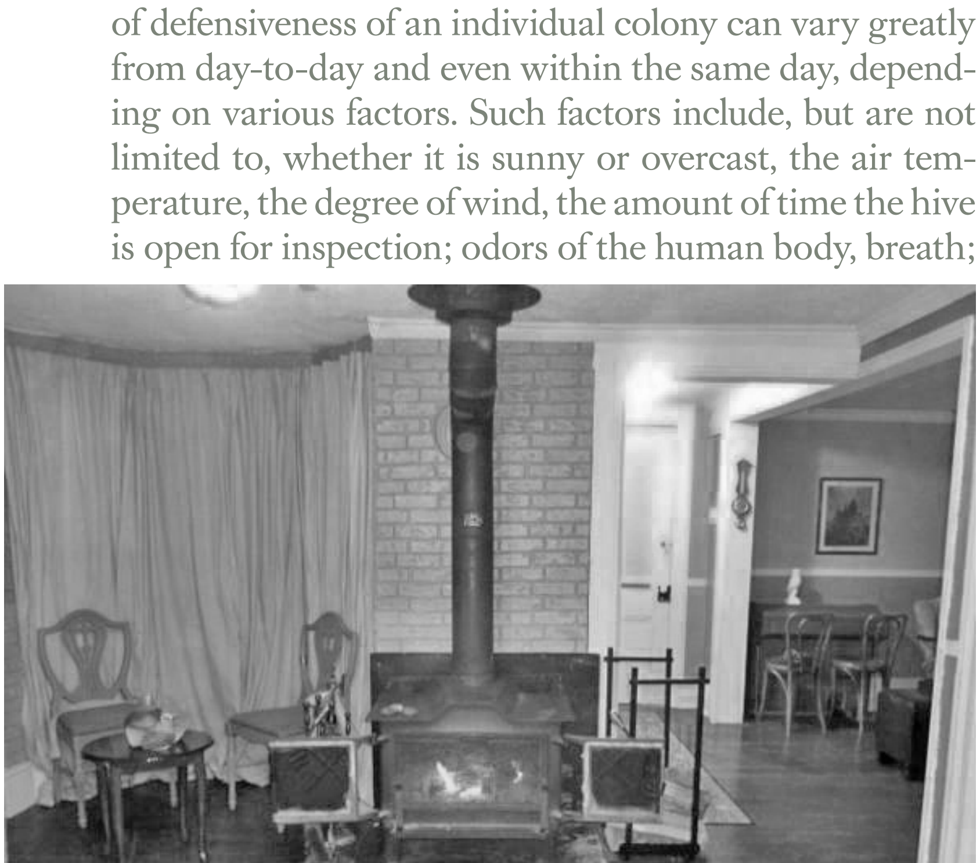
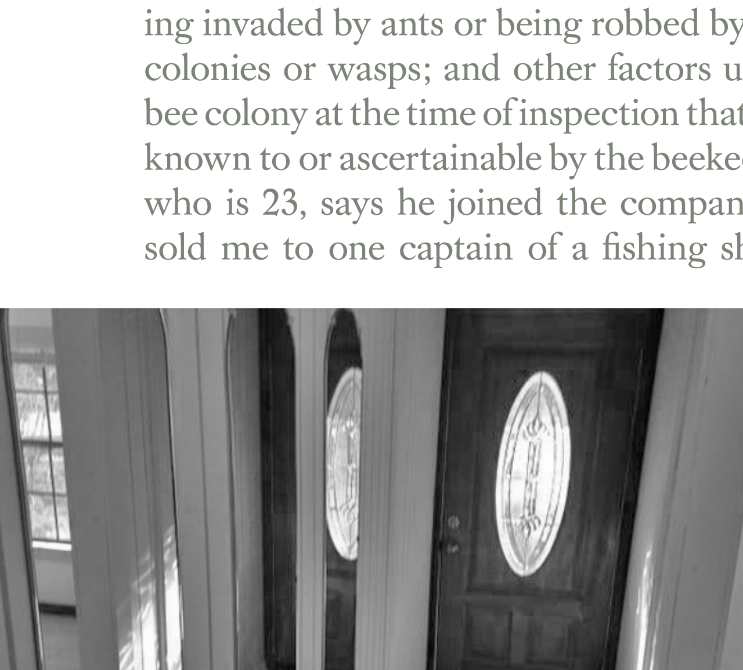
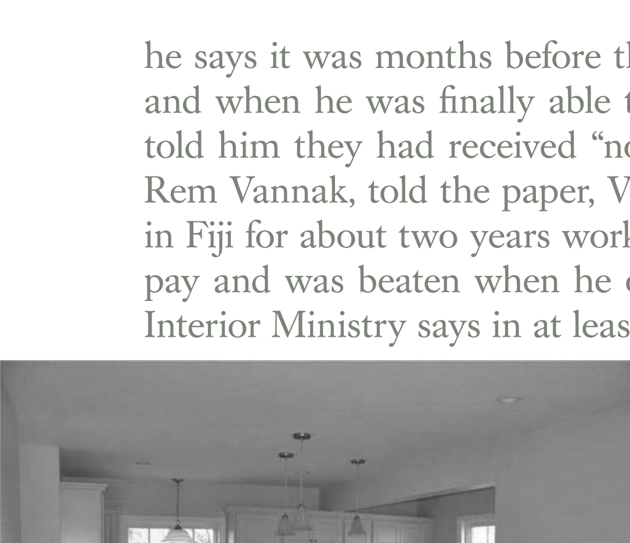
In 1988 there were 350,000 cases of polio worldwide. Last year there were 223. But getting all the way to zero will mean spending billions of dollars, penetrating the most remote regions of the globe, and facing down Taliban militants to get to the last unprotected children on Earth. (1) Bee stings: European honey bees generally are not aggressive toward people, but are defensive of their hive (family and food stores). However, the degree of defensiveness of an individual colony can vary greatly from day-to-day and even within the same day, depending on various factors. Such factors include, but are not limited to, whether it is sunny or overcast, the air temperature, the degree of wind, the amount of time the hive is open for inspection; odors of the human body, breath; color and texture of clothing; the degree of sharp, quick movement around the hive; accidental killing or crushing of bees during hive inspection; whether the colony has a functioning queen; whether the colony is being harassed by skunks, raccoons or opossums at night, being invaded by ants or being robbed by other honey bee colonies or wasps; and other factors unique to a honey bee colony at the time of inspection that currently are not known to or ascertainable by the beekeeper.



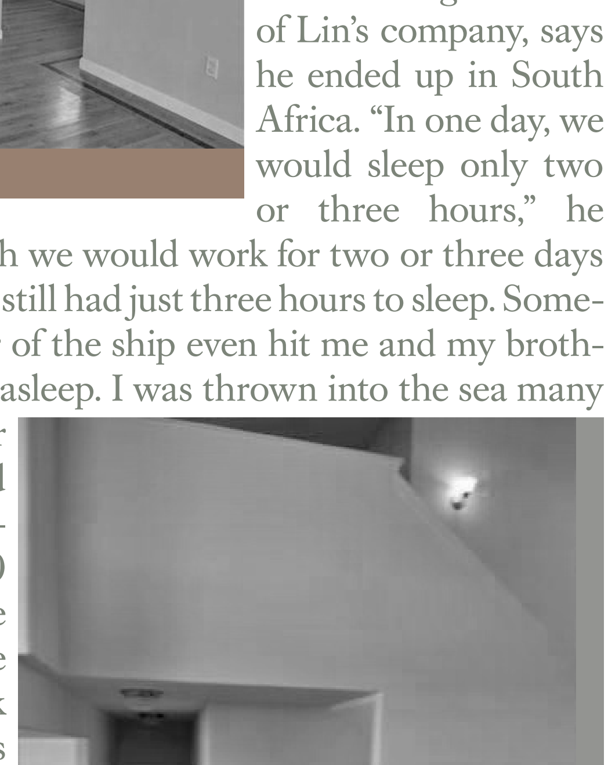
Yei Chenda, who is 23, says he joined the company in 2011. "They sold me to one captain of a fishing ship in Fiji, where my passport was taken and I was forced to work nearly 18 hours a day."



Yei Chenda says he was told by the Taiwanese captain that if he worked hard, he would be paid extra, and his parents would get his salary. But he says it was months before the ship called in to port and when he was finally able to ring his parents, they told him they had received "nothing." Another victim, Rem Vannak, told the paper, Voice of America, he was in Fiji for about two years working 21-hour days for no pay and was beaten when he complained. Cambodia's Interior Ministry says in at least 700 cases Cambodians were sent to work on ships by Giant Ocean, winding up across the globe, off the coasts of South Africa, Fiji, Qatar, Malaysia and Singapore.

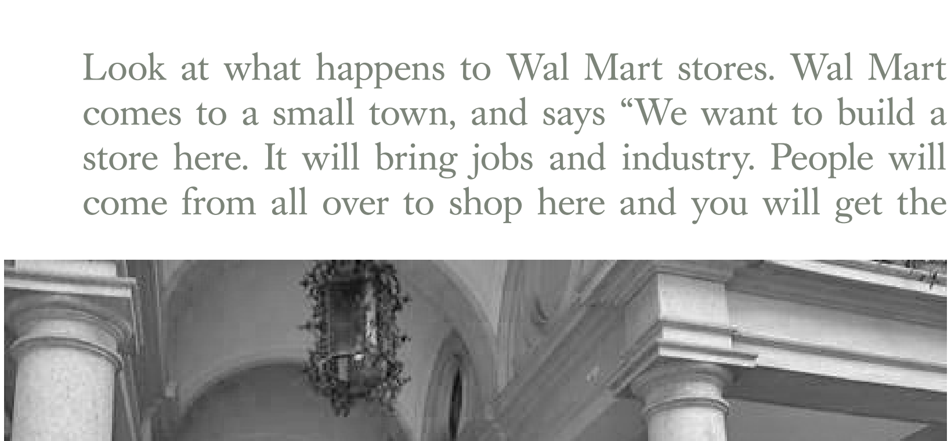


Kun Nath, another alleged victim of Lin's company, says he ended up in South Africa. "In one day, we would sleep only two or three hours," he said. "And though we would work for two or three days continuously, we still had just three hours to sleep. Sometimes, the owner of the ship even hit me and my brothers when we fell asleep. I was thrown into the sea many times, but other Khmers rescued me."



An estimated 34,000 Cambodians are believed to have gone to work abroad, in places like Thailand, Malaysia, South Korea or Japan in the past five months. In war, nations come alive. Killing and dying substantiate the existence of the nation-state. The sound and fury of battle lends credence to the idea that nations are real. Warfare and battle-the production of dead and wounded soldiers-anchors belief in material reality. Human beings are sacrificed in the name of perpetuating a magical entity-the body politic.

Look at what happens to Wal Mart stores. Wal Mart comes to a small town, and says "We want to build a store here. It will bring jobs and industry. People will come from all over to shop here and you will get the taxes."



They want 4 years tax free, and they want to build their store and not pay any building permit fees. Usually, the small town agrees. All the other stores in the town go out of business. The town loses 70% of it's tax revenue, and starts to go into debt. Getting the Wal Mart jobs is competitive, and people will travel 75 miles in any direction for one of them. After the 4 years of tax free Wal Mart, they ABANDON THE STORE AND LEAVE. All other stores in the area are closed. The town is bankrupt. Now if you are a reasonable person you are saying "How can they do that trick twice? Certainly a newspaper would write about it or something and a new town could research it... Well let me tell you: there are 3 movies about it. There are thousands of articles, dozens of books. And it STILL is happening.

Some two million people are employed by the Chinese government at all levels, as well as businesses, to monitor public opinion on Chinese social media. By trawling through blogs, microblog posts and social networks, these "Internet opinion analysts," most of them government employees, dissect public opinion on local issues and try to identify accusations of corruption and poor governance. They keep local leadership, from county to province, informed on a daily basis via text messages and written reports.

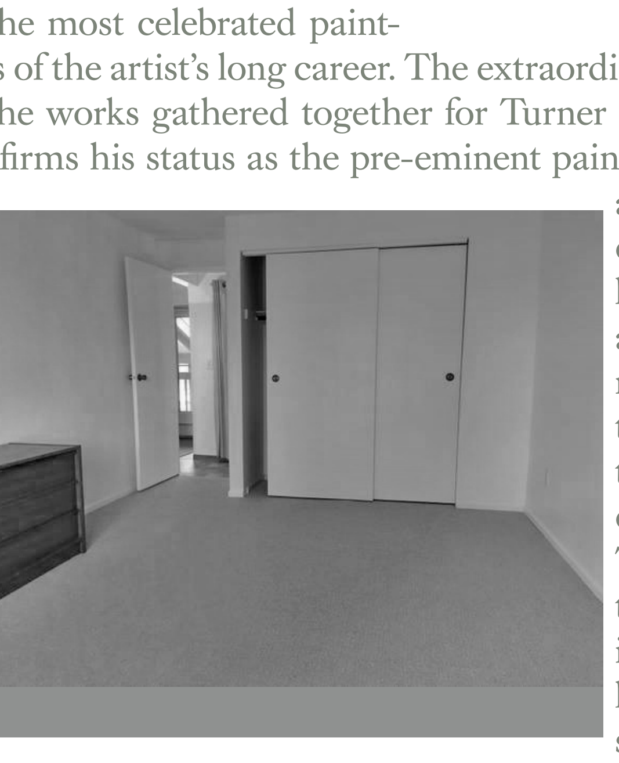
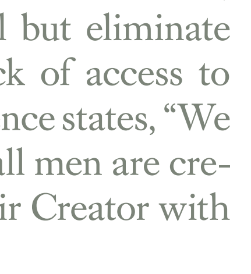
Turner and the Sea at the National Maritime Museum is the first full-scale examination of J.M.W Turner's lifelong fascination with the sea. Dramatic, contemplative, violent, beautiful, dangerous and sublime the sea was the perfect subject to showcase Turner's singular talents, and the 120 pieces on display include some of the most celebrated paintings of the artist's long career. The extraordinary quality of the works gathered together for Turner and the Sea confirms his status as the pre-eminent painter of water, and demonstrates his unique ability to represent the elemental power of the sea.



The exhibition features items on loan from some of the world's most prestigious artistic institutions including: The National Gallery, Tate, Yale Center for British Art, British Museum, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Royal Collection Trust, Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, Lisbon. A single-payer system would all but eliminate anybody dying unnecessarily due to lack of access to healthcare. Our Declaration of Independence states, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." How can somebody have life and happiness, without their health?



Despite the glaring hypocrisy of rich, white males who owned slaves stating all men are created equal, we have come a long way from 1776. Yet when it comes to the very basic need, we are left to the whim of a business. Single-payer is inevitable, and the ACA is a giant step in that direction. We need must hold our officials to a higher standard which will get us there faster. 40,000 people a year is absolutely unacceptable. Vermont saw the writings on the wall. Will the rest of us?

Climate Talks in Warsaw, it is easy to succumb to despair. The world's elite, it is painfully clear, will do little to halt the accelerating destruction of the ecosystem and eventually the human species. We have, through our ingenuity and hubris, unleashed the next great mass extinction on the planet.

And I suspect the reason we have never discovered signs of intelligent life elsewhere in the universe is because extraterrestrial societies that achieved similar levels of technological development also destroyed themselves. There are probably more wreckages of advanced civilizations, cursed by poisoned ecosystems, floating through the universe than we imagine.

Up until the 1890s, a corporation couldn't last more than 40 years in any state - which prevented them from being used as a tool to accumulate massive and multigenerational wealth. A corporation had to behave in the public interest, and when they weren't, thousands of them every year were given the corporate death penalty, their assets dissolved and their stockholders losing everything (but nothing more than) they had invested.

Over the years, as the Supreme Court has given more and more power to wealthy individuals and corporations, these responsibilities receded so far into the background that in one state, Delaware, your articles of incorporation can be a single sentence stating that you intend to "Do whatever is legal in the state of Delaware." Which is probably why more than half of all the companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange are Delaware corporations.

According to local law enforcement officials, members of Inagawa-Kai, a subgroup of the Yamaguchi-Gumi, the most violent subgroup of the Yakuza, recruit couriers to smuggle crystal methamphetamine to the CNMI from Asian countries via the Philippines. These couriers transport most of the crystal methamphetamine to the CNMI aboard commercial aircraft. In many cases the couriers are unwitting accomplices who are offered a vacation in Saipan in return for transporting a package or other item to Saipan.

The crystal methamphetamine often is hidden in the shafts of golf clubs, in bottles of shampoo, or in other items that are then given to the couriers. After arriving in the CNMI, couriers typically stay in a hotel room for up to a week until they are contacted by an individual who retrieves the package. The Yakuza also reportedly transports handguns to the CNMI along with shipments of crystal methamphetamine, increasing the potential for violence related to the drug. Affronti was charged with possession of child pornography, contact with a minor, indecent assault, furnishing alcohol to a minor, corruption of minors and other related charges. According to arrest papers, Affronti became involved with three girls - ages 13, 16 and 17 - in May. He was arrested after an investigation by Freeland police, with assistance from the Luzerne County District Attorney's Office.

Arrest papers indicated that police found nude photos of minor females and that Affronti allegedly came in contact with one of the females without her consent. Affronti told the judge that he has since moved to Bloomsburg after living in Freeland for one year. Dixon set bail at $200,000 straight cash due to the seriousness of the charges. Affronti pleaded with the judge not to send him to jail and Dixon said that if Affronti could get 10 percent of the bail figure he would allow his release until his preliminary hearing. Affronti said he didn't think he could make bail and was remanded to the Luzerne County Correctional Facility in Wilkes-Barre.

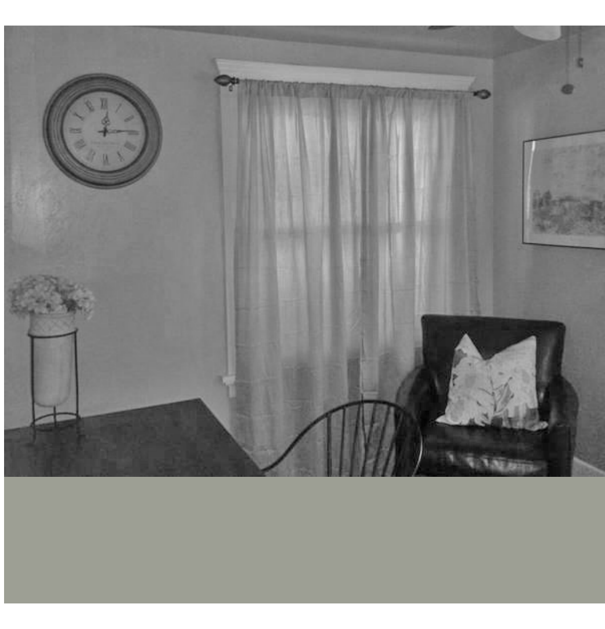
How does one make sense of the injustice of Johannesburg's "clean sweep" campaign? In the name of cleaning up the streets of downtown Johannesburg, thousands of street traders have had their stalls demolished in recent days. The lack of strong or widespread objection from the public and urban planners in response to this merciless act by the authorities is remarkable. Perhaps more disappointing is the lack of solidarity action on the part of civil society organisations. A systemic allergic reaction also may include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and dizziness.

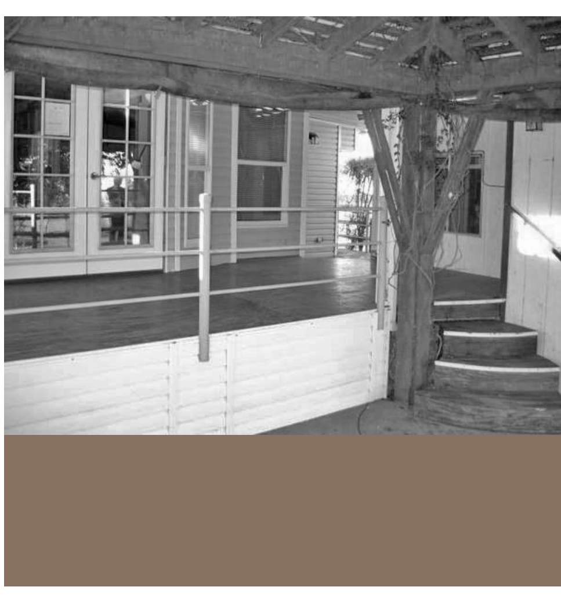
When the most serious of these reactions occurs anaphylaxis the person experiences one or more of the following: wheezing, hoarseness, swelling of the tongue, fainting, difficulty breathing followed by a drop in blood pressure that can lead to shock and death. Mocek says he has been taking pictures of the Seattle federal building and the vehicles parked outside "two or three days a week for the past few weeks." He is using the images to make a record of license plate numbers, which he plans to eventually publish in order to draw attention to police use of automatic license plate readers, or ALPRs. These small devices are mounted on police cruisers or objects like road signs and bridges.

They use high-speed cameras to photograph and catalog thousands of license plates per minute. According to a recent ACLU report titled "You Are Being Tracked," 600 local and state police departments, along with federal agencies, are using ALPRs to create "enormous databases of innocent motorists' location information." Some of the data, including the license plate number, date, time and location of every scan, is stored indefinitely "with few or no restrictions to protect privacy rights."

/2/2013 - Outbound and Inbound mail delayed A spammer compromised one of the email accounts hosted on our mail server and used it to send a large volume of spam. This has caused intermittent delays in message delivery since Monday. Currently the server is working at full capacity to remove the Spam messages from the mail queue. Once complete we will re-enable the server to send out messages. Coincidentally, both data centers used by Reflexion, our inbound Spam filter provider, had an outage this morning. Messages were spooled and are now starting to be delivered. One will find inbound messages delayed as a result. Messages viewed in the Reflexion report interface will show the message when it arrived in the spool; the actual delivery time will be later. We apologize for the inconvenience.

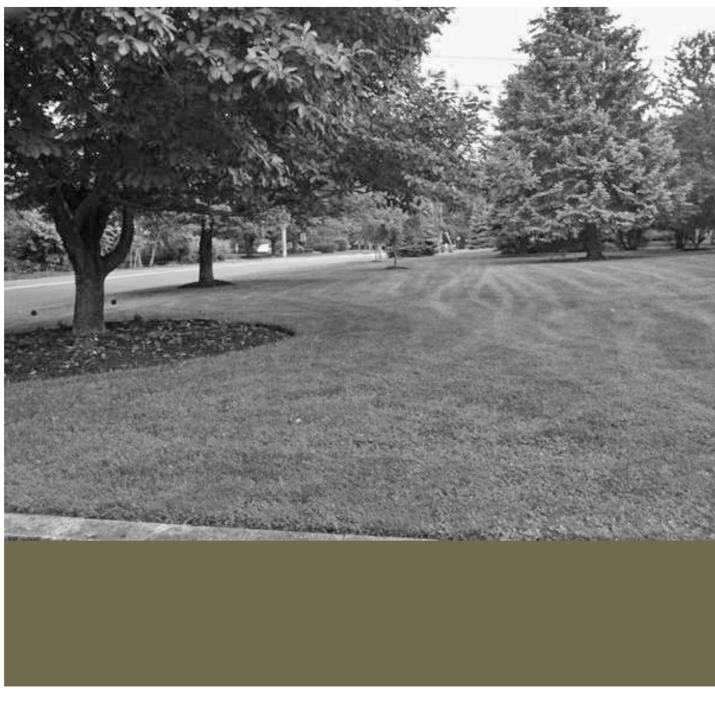


50,000 garment workers demanding higher pay flooded the streets of Dhaka, Bangladesh Saturday, and 20,000 shut down dozens of factories by walking off the job, in the largest demonstrations to ever sweep the notoriously dangerous and low-wage Bangladesh garment industry. The protests continued on Sunday, with workers and their supporters blocking traffic, marching along a key highway, and clashing with police who shot rubber bullets and tear gas at crowds of thousands. The underside of the tech-fueled housing boom sweeping San Francisco burst noisily to the surface Wednesday when hundreds of protesters blocked the doorway to a weather-beaten building near Nob Hill to resist the eviction of an elderly Chinese American couple and their disabled daughter.



The eight-unit complex at the corner of Jackson and Larkin streets had been emptied over the past year of all occupants except for the Lee family, which has lived in their two-bedroom apartment for 34 years. Building owner Matthew Miller gave them notice more than a year ago and intends - according to the Lees - to turn the aged building into high-end tenant-in-common units. Poon Heung Lee, an 80-year-old retired hotel housekeeper, said he can't find anything to equal the $778 he pays monthly for his rent-controlled home, so his intention was to rebuff sheriff's deputies if they showed up to carry out the vacate order due to be served Wednesday.

Of course they shut the Federal government down. Tea Party Republicans long for the days when there were no government authorities to enforce laws and restrain the power of unchecked wealth, the days when there was no Justice Department, no SEC, no other agencies protecting Americans from the misdeeds of bankers and corporate titans. Officers shot Bennet, claiming in their report that he lunged at them with a knife.



Video of the incident, however, shows Bennett rolling backward in his chair as two officers approach. They draw their guns when Bennett stands up. Bennett appears to stand with his arms at his side, yet the officers fire at him. He collapses in the street. "Officers drew their weapons, they told him to freeze or something of that nature, ordered him to drop the weapon or something of that nature and he just froze," said Maurice Bunch, the neighbor whose security camera recorded the incident. "He didn't move an inch. As you can see in the video they just opened fire." On Thursday night, Los Angeles police arrested 54 people in a massive civil disobedience involving more than 200 Walmart workers outside the newly opened Chinatown Walmart store. "If instituted the TransPacificPartnership's intellectual property regime would trample over individual rights and free expression, as well as ride roughshod over the intellectual and creative commons. If you read, write, publish, think, listen, dance, sing or invent; if you farm or consume food; if you're ill now or might one day be ill, the TPP has you in its crosshairs." There are a lot of people on our planet who live lives they love!

Are you one of them? No matter how wonderful your life is, you can always make it a little bit nicer. Maybe you can think of something you can choose to do a little bit differently to make your life a little better. Maybe you can think of something you can choose to do a little bit differently to make the lives of those around you a little bit better. Wouldn't it be nice if those choices are the same ones? A homeless man is in jail after throwing pieces of concrete at a St. Petersburg hotel. Police say 41-year-old David Allen Jensen told them he was trying to get inside the hotel early Wednesday because zombies were chasing him. They say he broke the glass at the Hilton St. Petersburg Bayfront hotel with a doughnut-sized chunk of concrete used to protect sprinkler heads.

Nearby security guards told police Jensen was trying to open doors to a number of cars. Jensen told police he was looking for tobacco. Jensen faces multiple charges, including burglary and throwing a deadly missile into a building. He remained in jail Thursday. Jail records did not list an attorney for Jensen. "I knew that when the great guiding spirit cleaves humanity into two antagonistic halves, I would be with the people. I know this, I see it printed in the night sky that I, eclectic dissembler of doctrine and psychoanalyst of dogma, howling like one possessed, will assault the barricades or the trenches, will take my bloodstained weapon, and consumed with fury, slaughter any enemy who falls into my hands."

Joshua Survivors and Survivalists gives a rambunctious and critical twist to contemporary apocalypticism. Eschewing the privileged paranoia that often dominates this theme, this issue offers a collection that recasts apocalypse in terms of real-world struggles, traumas and resilience. In the mix we've got zombies, black metal, queer survivalism, Indigenous language resurgence and atomic bombs. In other words, this is a grab bag of carnivalesque realness, the rowdy party in the middle of the apocalypse that is always to come. After all, in the face of so much doom, what is there to do but get wild and wily? Ganvie (meaning: 'the collectivity of those who found peace at last') is a lake village in Benin, lying in Lake Nokou, near Cotonou. The village has a population of around 20-30,000, contains around 3,000 stilted buildings and is probably the largest lake village in Africa.

Architects continue to build miserable cities and savage the landscape and complain of low fees and insufficient work, doctors fail at providing accessible health care and complain about regulation and slow payments, lawyers ineptly fail their jailed clients and demand better law schools and more courts and prisons, academics lecture, write, orate and cut classes to screw their students financially and carnally, freedom fighters become filthy rich murderous tyrants to buy armaments from mendacious suppliers coddled by governments, comsec coders sell their brains to cybersecurity hoodlums who rush to buttress bumbling spies.

Under current law, corporations can hide hundreds of chemicals - including potentially hazardous carcinogens, pathogens and contaminants - under a single vague term like "fragrance" on a product's label. With an Arctic cyclone on the way, the strong winds and rain are said to be on course to possibly loosen the ice coverage even further, thinning the water and potentially expanding the lake.

This all falls within an undeniable rising of temperatures across the globe, with the Northern hemisphere finding itself particularly affected (thanks largely to an ever-depleting hole in the ozone layer). Though April featured the 9th highest snow storm on record, according to the Washington Post, May's snow cover ranked the third lowest since 1967, melting almost half of the ice caps' snowy layer. Many scientists and environmental activists and just plain sane people are heeding this as a warning to take environmental action, as an increase in sea temperature is largely considered to be contributing to melting ice caps the world over.

Where exterior walls once were, some houses sport charred holes from fires lit by people trying to stay warm. In 2011, two Chicago firefighters died trying to extinguish such a fire at a vacant foreclosed building. Now, houses across the South Side are pockmarked with red Xs, indicating places the fire department believes to structurally unsound. In other states -- Wisconsin, Minnesota, and New York, to name recent examples -- foreclosed houses have taken to exploding after bank contractors forgot to turn off the gas.

We have been blinded to the depravity of our ruling elite by the relentless propaganda of public relations firms that work on behalf of corporations and the rich. The turning of the phases occurs in Calabria where Pythagoras had his sect in Crotone. Pythagoras claimed he had lived four lives and this with his notion of metempsychosis is the structure of the film showing one phase and then turning into another phase. A famous anecdote is that Pythagoras heard the cry of his dead friend in the bark of a dog. Fukushima's owner, Tokyo Electric (Tepco), does not have the resources to handle 1,300 spent fuel rods now sitting in a badly damaged pool perched 100 feet in the air, with the potential to spew out more than 15,000 times as much radiation as was released at Hiroshima.

Congress may not be able to pass a budget, but the U.S. military can still launch commando raids in Libya and Somalia, the Afghan War can still be prosecuted, Italy can be garrisoned by American troops (putting the "empire" back in Rome), Africa can be used as an imperial playground (as in the late nineteenth century "scramble for Africa," but with the U.S. and China doing the scrambling this time around), and the military-industrial complex can still dominate the world's arms trade.

In the halls of Congress and the Pentagon, it's business as usual, if your definition of "business" is the power and profits you get from constantly preparing for and prosecuting wars around the world. "War is a racket," General Smedley Butler famously declared in 1935, and even now it's hard to disagree with a man who had two Congressional Medals of Honor to his credit and was intimately familiar with American imperialism.

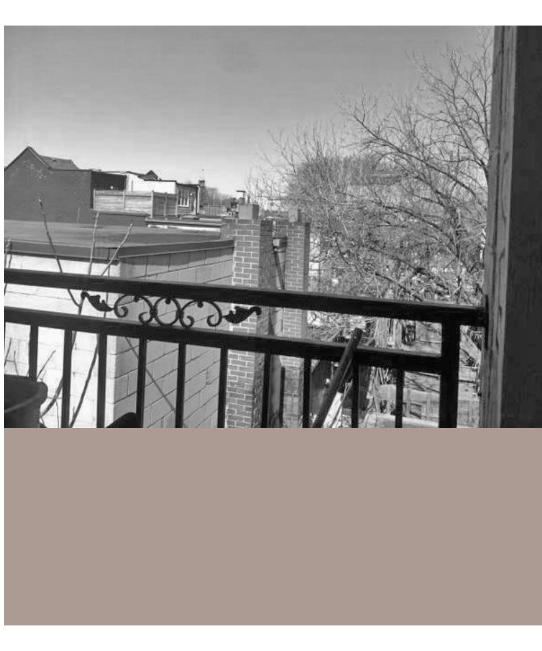
Just last month, a Georgia resident called 911 for medical assistance , worried about whether her fianc was acting erratically because he had overdosed on diabetes medication.



But when police arrived, they say the 43-year-old man lunged at them, and killed him in front of his fianc, and 8-year-old daughter. The month before that , an unarmed man was shot dead by police in North Carolina after he knocked on a resident's door seeking help with a car accident. The residents called 911 as a precautionary measure, but police hit the 24-year-old with a Taser as he approached, and then shot him. We spend our lives fighting to get people very slightly more stupid than ourselves to accept truths that the great men have always known.

They have known for thousands of years that to lock a sick person into solitary confinement makes him worse. They have known for thousands of years that a poor man who is frightened of his landlord and of the police is a slave. They have known it. We know it. But do the great enlightened mass of the people know it? No. It is our task. Iran recently unveiled the Fotros, a long endurance military drone capable of carrying out air-to-ground missile attacks. The Fotros joins an astounding variety of military drones that Iran began developing in the early 1980s. Indonesia's military, with U.S. support, launched in 1965 a yearlong campaign to ostensibly exterminate communist leaders, functionaries, party members and sympathizers in that country. By its end, the bloodbath--much of it carried out by rogue death squads and paramilitary gangs--had decimated the labor union movement along with the intellectual and artistic class, opposition parties, university student leaders, journalists, ethnic Chinese and many who just happened to be in the wrong spot at the wrong time. By some estimates, more than a million people were slaughtered. Many of the bodies were dumped into rivers, hastily buried or left on roadsides. Dear Friend, How are you doing and how is your family doing? My name is Abdullahi Wahab. I work with one of the Fidelity Banks here in Lagos, Nigeria. I would need your consent to present you as the next of kin to our late customer who died of heart attack in 2009. He was a wealthy business man who deposited a huge amount in our Bank.

He died without any registered next of kin as he was long divorced and had no child. I was his account officer and have in my possession all the documents required to present you as his beneficiary next of kin. I contacted you because you have same name identity with our late client and can perfectly fit in as next of kin, We can work together to claim this fund. Please listen, this is real and goes on in Banks all over the world without people knowing. Let us utilize this opportunity because it does not come always. In 2010, the Office of Inspector General for Health and Human Services said that bad hospital care contributed to the deaths of 180,000 patients in Medicare alone in a given year. Now comes a study in the current issue of the Journal of Patient Safety that says the numbers may be much higher: between 210,000 and 440,000 patients each year who go to the hospital for care suffer some type of preventable harm that contributes to their death, the study says. That would make medical errors the third-leading cause of death in America, behind heart disease, which is the first, and cancer, which is second.
